

iSucceed MATH Combines Print Resources with Innovative Courseware to Deliver Comprehensive Math Intervention

BOSTON — January 22, 2008 — Great Source, a division of Houghton Mifflin Harcourt Publishing Company, one of the leading educational publishers, today announced the availability of a new math intervention solution called iSucceed MATH™. An innovative program for students in grades 3–8, iSucceed MATH™ combines the best practices of teacher-directed group instruction, interactive courseware, active practice with games, fact fluency, and one-on-one tutoring. It incorporates instructional methods that are designed to reach a wide range of intervention students, including English language learners and students with special needs.

The courseware includes a powerful learning management system, enabling educators to chart the progress of intervention students using NCLB filters and to make data-driven instructional decisions. Educators who need to demonstrate adequate yearly progress can compare individual and group performance over time using the robust reporting tool.

iSucceed MATH™ is appropriate for use before, during, and afterschool with small groups of students as well as in whole-class settings. "We are really excited about the possibilities for iSucceed MATH™," said Debbie Secrist, national sales manager for Great Source. "There is a richness to the instruction that is complemented by the balance of both print and technology components. This complete system provides all the explicit instructional support, practice, and flexibility needed to deliver effective math intervention to struggling students with diverse needs."

A full day of professional development accompanies the program package, and a second day of training is available for an additional charge. To learn more about iSucceed MATH™, visit www.greatsource.com/isucceed.
